

MANY CONFIRMED
AT LOCAL CHURCH

Last Sunday was really an important day in the annals of Our Lady of Perpetual Help church. It marked the end of a long period of teaching and training by Father James A. Donohoe and his assistant, Father James B. Doyle, and unlimited patient work by the faithful Sisters of the Holy Family.

In addition to the effort of the Fathers and Sisters, the children and their parents gave their time, energy and ardent hopes to make the occasion memorable.

The class was composed of more than two hundred boys and girls ranging in age from adults down to past eleven. Each one of these was passed individually by Father Donohoe, after he or she had been well instructed under the guidance of the Sisters.

For months past each of these children waited prayerfully for the great day when he or she would be made a strong and perfect Christian by the sacrament of confirmation. The hour was set for 4 o'clock in the afternoon, and long before that time the beautiful church was filled to overflowing by the parents and friends.

The boys and girls, the former dressed in new suits and the latter in white dresses and veils, were held in order until the Archbishop's arrival, and then, two by two, the boys first, they marched down the main aisle of the church, presenting a sweet picture that will be remembered for many a year.

When they were all seated they occupied forty pews. It is needless to say everyone was proud of them as they recited their prayers and sang their songs of praise and thanksgiving.

The ceremony was performed by Archbishop J. J. Collins, of New York, an assistant of Cardinal Patrick Hayes, at this time in San Francisco taking part in the St. Ignatius jubilee celebration. He came in place of Archbishop Edward Hanna.

Archbishop Collins prefaced his work with a short but inspiring address in which he both stirred religious enthusiasm and through a gleam of humor brought a smile to every face, thus relieving the strain. In the administering of the sacrament he was assisted by Fathers John Lynch, John Hanton, Kevin Doyle, James B. Doyle, P. Maher, Louis Sciochetti, James Smythe, and James A. Donohoe.

The following are the names of those who were confirmed:

Dolores Allen, Catherine Aiello, Celeste Armando, Laura Anderson, Rose Ambrosio, Janet Bernardi, Rita Benassini, Josephine Birdsall, Rose Buonocore, Josephine Bertalini, Emma Boskey, Yolanda Barsaglia, Nathalie Bogart, Beatrice Cuneo, Lillian Crawford, Vernon Christian, Edith Cochran, Anna Coulter, Theresa Compagno, Clara Casanova, Myrtle Chandler, Florence Christian, Marguerite Continolo, Evelyn Core, Rashel Davison, Myrtle Dougherty, Alice De Ram, Gertrude De Spor, Marie Denevi, Lucy Fahey, Josephine Francesconi, Mary Finetti, Evelyn Ferrera, Alicia Fields, Charlotte Godfrey, Virginia Goodell, Delphine Gregoire, Muriel Grisler, Dorothy Gordon, Mary Gamba, Elena Giomi, Dorothy Green, Lois Gohl, Ann Elizabeth Headrick, Ellen Holmquist, Millicent Johnson, Alice Johnson, Theresa Kohmann, Azilda Kohmann, Helen Kennedy, Catherine Kennedy, Helen Knoll, Catherine Loomis, Virginia Larkin, Frances Spame, Evelyn Lowden, Lorraine McMurtly, Norma Maricocchi, Grace Miller, Juanita Musante, Helen Monaghan, Lena Maricocchi, Catherine McKee, Marcella Monetti, Kathleen McGrath, Gladys McLaughlin, Dina Marotta, Dolores Messico, Dorothea Monetti, Julia Nevi, Gladys Oakley, Mary Phelan, Marie Pfeifer, Adeline Perada, Angeline Pallio, Dolores Rudolph, Evelyn Rancatore, Josephine

NATIVE DAUGHTERS' WHIST

This whist party was considerably different to the average. It was introduced by an appropriate program of speaking and music. So many came to play, the Masonic Hall could not accommodate them, so a dining room had to be arranged and it, too, was soon filled. In spite of the large gathering every move was made without the slightest disorder. When the playing was over everyone was well pleased, especially the winners. After the game those who cared to dance did so, to good music, and the cup of coffee and piece of cake were also obtainable. The success of the whole affair was due in no small measure to the energetic work of Mrs. Margaret Steele and other Native Daughters. Of the proceeds $50 will be presented to the Homeless Children's fund.

DEATH RESULT OF OFFICER'S PRANK

Wounded last Sunday morning at his alleged bootlegging establishment at Belmont by a San Mateo police officer, who admitted he had been drinking, John Mills died early Wednesday morning at the Mills Memorial hospital.

Mills, who was 27 years of age, was badly wounded in the abdomen, and little hope had been held for his recovery.

Charges of manslaughter will be placed against John J. Henderson, who fired the fatal shot, and who has been suspended from the San Mateo police force, and Tom Casey, pool hall proprietor and companion of Henderson, it was stated at the office of District Attorney Franklin Swart. Henderson and Casey, former star baseball players with the San Mateo Blues, were released on bail of $3,000 and $2,000, respectively, following the shooting, being charged with assault with a deadly weapon.

According to San Mateo and Belmont police, who investigated the shooting, Henderson and Casey said they had left a Burlingame party where liquor had flowed freely to get a gallon of moonshine at Mills' place. Henderson said that he fired at a light over a door at the Mills place when the latter failed to respond to their pounding at the door. The bullet penetrated a wooden casing and struck Mills in the side.

SPINSTERS CONVENE IN OAKLAND CHURCH

Last Friday evening, October 17, the Ladies' Aid of the Daly City Methodist church presented the comic sketch, "Spinsters' Convention," to a full house in the Good Will M. E. church in Oakland.

The play was received with the same enthusiasm and applause as in all previous performances. In other words, it "went over big."

Hannah Biggerstaff, with her hair resembling Maggie Jiggs' own hair-dress, was a scream; Cleopatra came running up the aisle calling "Wait for me; don't start until I get there." Everyone roared with laughter, as she certainly did play her part well, and at every motion put before the house she stood up and said "I third it." All the ladies deserve special mention, as it would be hard to say who was the best performer.

The homeward trip from Oakland caused quite a furore in the dining room of the ferry boat, where the performers took refreshments, being dressed in their quaint old-style costumes, and enjoyed by a big audience.

The sketch will be staged in the auditorium of Jefferson Union high school on the evening of November 14, under the auspices of the P. T. A., and it will be worth while for anybody to witness this most comical sketch of the season. Tickets are now on sale, so get in line.

FLORISTS DEFEAT
MERCHANTS' NINE

Errors lost for the Daly City Merchants their chance to defeat the Olympic Florists, last Sunday, on Bryant diamond. The local team was beaten by a 9 to 4 score.

The Merchants' infielders made three boots that cost the team five runs, which would have meant a tie game. This victory put the Florists into a tie for first place in the Spalding league, and Daly City is tied for fifth.

"Curly" Arata, local twirler, did not pitch a bad game in his initial start. He allowed the Florists twelve hits, six walks and struck out six. "Curly" has not been able to practice of late, which caused a weak finish.

Manager Dito started "Lefty" Rea on the mound for the Florists, and Lefty held Daly City to a lone tally up to the eighth frame. In that inning the local batters coupled a walk and three bingles together to drive across three runs.

The batting stars for the winners were Creighton, Bonfili and McGloin. These three players collected two hits each, as did Cruchoff for the Daly City Merchants. Duke also turned in a sensational catch from his center-field position.

Daly City will oppose the O'Brien, Sportorno & Mitchell nine Sunday in their third league game. The other contests of the division are Mission Reds vs. Olympic Florists, and Glen Park Merchants vs. the Napa Soda Thirties.

JEFFERSON LOSES
BY 7 TO 0 MARGIN

The highly touted Balboa eleven emerged from one of the hardest fought battles ever staged on the Jefferson gridiron, last Friday, with a mere 7 to 0 victory over the local warriors.

Smarting from the effects of previous defeats, the Jefferson gridriders displayed stubborn resistance to change pre-game aspects of the score. Balboa figured to win by at least a 20 point margin, but subsequent events proved that they were lucky to win at all.

Jefferson's defense was by far the outstanding feature of this contest. Time and again some local linesman would slash through and nail the ball carrier. Balboa executed fifty-two plays during the game and on exactly half of them a loss was recorded. The players responsible for the above fact include Flannigan, SoRelle, J. Sanbrailo, M. Bouskus, and Guerrero.

The Indians had stopped every play previous to the scoring thrust, and were enjoying a second wind when out of the scramble came the deciding blow. The run started on Jefferson's 41 yard line after five minutes had elapsed in the fourth quarter. Matulich, quarterback, crossed up the opposition with a neatly executed cut-back through tackle.

Outside of the touchdown play, Balboa was shadowed by Jefferson's offense. The visitors made five first downs and gained a total of 78 yards; while Jefferson was credited with six new starts and 104 yards gained. The local stars on the offense were Kalinin and SoRelle.

Jefferson's only serious scoring attempt was initiated in the fourth quarter and stopped by the final gun. The Indians carried the ball from Balboa's 44 yard line to within five steps of the goal in seven plays before the shot intervened.

According to the officials, this contest was one of the hardest fought and cleanest played they ever officiated in. Only six penalties were stepped off for a total of 40 yards. Most of the offenses were two incomplete passes in a series of plays.

She carried a bouquet of orange blossoms, lilies of the valley and orchid cyclamens, and was given away by her uncle, Mr. Louis Delfino. The bride had three attendants. The bridesmaids, Miss Celesta Altieri and Miss Mary Zipser, were dressed in chiffon ankle-length frocks with full skirt and fitted bodice. Miss Altieri looked very lovely in maize, and Miss Mary Zipser was very becoming in apple green. The former carried a bouquet of yellow roses, and the latter red roses.

All the attendants wore horse-hair picture hats, lace mittens and shoes dyed to complete the different color schemes.

PASTOR TO EXPLAIN KEY TO SCRIPTURES

Services at the Calvary Baptist Chapel, 5724 Mission street, as announced by Rev. Charles Wossner, for next Sunday, are: The morning sermon, "Title Examined." The evening sermon, "The Only Text Outside of the Bible."

The story is told of a young lady who once laid down a book which she had just finished with the remark that it was the dullest story she had ever read. In the course of time she became engaged to a young man, and one night she said to him: "I have a book in my library whose author's name, and even initials, are precisely the same as yours. Isn't that a singular coincidence?" "I don't think so," he replied. "Why not, pray?" "For the simple reason that I wrote the book." That night the young lady sat up until 2 o'clock reading the book again. And this time it seemed the most interesting story she had ever read. The once dull book was now fairly fascinating, because she knew and loved the author. So a child of God finds his Bible interesting because he knows and loves the Author. It is his Father's message addressed to him.

Another story is told of a nobleman who once gave a celebrated actress a Bible, telling her at the time that there was a treasure in it. She, thinking he meant religion, laid the Bible aside. She died, and all she had was sold. The person who bought the Bible, on turning its leaves, found a note for $2,500 in it. Poor creature! Had she read the book, she might not only have found the note, but the "pearl of great price," as well. In like manner the Bible is treated by millions today. It is shelved and its pages are not even opened. To them if they do open its pages the words are just mere symbols or cold print. What is needed is a "new love" in the heart, and this love comes only through the acceptance of Jesus Christ. "God is a Spirit and they that worship Him must worship Him in Spirit and in Truth."

At the evening service the pastor of Calvary Chapel will explain "the key to the Scriptures."

Prone pedestrians might also be characterized as a bumper crop.

RALLYING TO SUPPORT OF GEORGE A. KNEESE

Surveyor George A. Kneese is well on his road to victory. That is the conclusion of citizens of the county who have made a thorough canvass of the developments in the last few weeks. The election is only a few days off—Tuesday, November fourth—and the final reports may well be expected to confirm the present deductions.

This is as it should be. The name of George Kneese is a synonym for the highest efficiency. He has a long record of achievements. One would have to go far, indeed, to find a public official with a "past performance" of the worth of our popular surveyor. Success counts in serving the people, as in business affairs, and we cannot recall any office holder with such a long list of successes as "George."

Surveyor Kneese has grown up with the county and knows its needs. His friends—and they are legion—point out that the census figures prove the surveyor has had no small part in helping to place San Mateo county foremost in the state for progress in the past decade.

The thousands of supporters of George Kneese call attention to the undeniable circumstances that communities throughout the county seek advice from him whenever they have civic improvements confronting them. They cite the many projects he has engineered, not only for the county, but for nearly every municipality in the county.

Rally to his support, citizens, men and women both.

SUICIDE IDENTIFIED

The body of the man who was discovered on a flower bed in the Home of Peace cemetery on Thursday of last week, by Marshal Joseph Cavali, of Lawndale, has been identified as that of Fred Watkins, from the Alta Hotel, San Francisco. Funeral services were held under the auspices of Crocker Chapter, Masonic Lodge, last Wednesday at 2 P. M., from Lasswell's undertaking parlors. Interment was in Mount Olivet.

POPULAR JURIST DESERVES SUPPORT

Judge Ellis C. Johnson is deserving of the most hearty support of all thinking citizens at the election so near at hand. The record of the popular jurist is an open book for all the world to read. He has made good, as is said along the street, and there is absolutely no reason for even considering putting any other man in his place.

"Every man in his place" may well be the rallying cry in a democracy, and it may be asserted without trepidation that the candidate for Justice of the Peace in the First township is ideal for the position he has held for quite a period. Judge Johnson has brought the highest kind of honor on both himself and the community he serves by his unswerving devotion to the traditional principles of the bench.

Fellow citizens, do not forget to cast your ballots on Tuesday, November fourth, for Judge Johnson. There is seldom any occasion for changing an efficient office holder, and least of all that of a member of the judiciary.

Charles Cairns, one of Daly City's earliest residents, passed away at North Palo Alto on October 15. Mr. Cairns was one of the best known home builders of this section, having erected many of the best residences in Daly City. He is survived by his wife, Catharine Cairns, and son, Burton Cairns, also two brothers, John and James Cairns.

DID HE FIND IT?

A party of tourists were enjoying the wonders of the Grand Canyon. A native passing by was asked by the driver of the car: "I say, neighbor, can you tell us what caused this terrible gorge?" The rider gazed fondly at the wonderful sight and replied: "Wal, they say a Scotchman once owned a ranch near here, and one day he lost a golf ball down a gopher hole on his private course."—Forbes Magazine.

All products of combustion are vented outdoors.

Completely installed for $10.00 down and only $7.50 a month.

The Circulating Room Heater

The Circulating Room Heater is ideal for heating small homes, stores, and offices. No basement is necessary.

This circulating heater is a graceful cabinet, harmonizing with the most tasteful furnishings. You'll like its clean, convenient heating. It circulates healthful warm air in from 2 to 4 rooms. No products of combustion can escape into the room—they are vented outdoors.

This economical heater will be installed by us for only $5.00 down and $7.00 per month.

The Radiantfire

You can modernize your fireplace and change it into cheerful, care-free heating by installing a Humphrey Radiantfire.

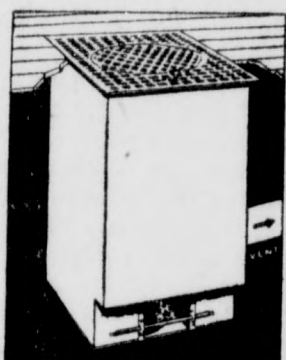

The Radiantfire does away with the discomforts of the old-fashioned fireplace, with its wasteful heating, dirt and ashes and all attending labor. At the same time it gives you all the romance of an open fireplace.

Have a Radiantfire installed in your fireplace. Light it—quickly it takes away the chill and spreads radiant warmth to every corner of the room. There is a Radiantfire suitable for every fireplace, in colors and designs to conform with any decorative scheme. We'll install one in your fireplace for $3.00 down.

In addition to these three inexpensive but efficient heaters, there are warm-air furnaces suitable for homes having a basement.

And remember, when you have gas there is no fuel to order. No cleaning to do. You pay for the gas after using.

The Fighting Tenderfoot

THE STORY

Garrett O'Hara, young lawyer, on his way to practice at Concho, wild western town, is shot at from ambush. He hears the desperado who fired the shot, Shep Sanderson, talking to Barbara Steelman, who thought the shot was directed at her. Garrett's resemblance to Judge Warner convinces Barbara that Sanderson fired at Garrett thinking he was Warner. She advises Garrett not to go to Concho, center of a big cattle war. He insists. She tells him to see Steve Worrall.

"Are you the floormaster, Mr. Sanderson?" Though he knew it was not safe, O'Hara could not keep a touch of jauntness out of his retort. The bad man's shallow eyes, a washed-out blue in color, narrowed to points of savage cruelty. He had found a safe object upon which to expend his venom.

"Sa-ay, pilgrim, don't get funny with me. It ain't supposed to be safe. I aim to fix yore clock right now. After I've worked you over for a spell you hve off for parts unknown an' don't never let me see you again."

"Or you'll shoot straighter than you did this afternoon," suggested O'Hara. "You don't have to get on the prod with me, fellow. I'm startin' to clean up on you right now."

A prize fighter had once given Garrett O'Hara six rules for rough-and-tumble fighting. He forgot the last five but remembered the first. It was to carry the attack rather than to wait for it. Now he reached for his foe's big outcropping ears, gripped them tightly, and jerked the unkempt head toward him. With all the force of his well-muscled arms O'Hara thrust back the head of the helpless giant, then leaped on him, twining his legs back of Sanderson's stocky ones. His feet moved up and down, swiftly and savagely.

The bully let out a yell of pain. "Take him off! Take him off! He's killin' me."

The dancers had pressed back from the fighting area. They stared at the entwined men, amazed at Sanderson's cry for help. For the stranger's hands still clung to the flapping ears. It was certain that he had not knifed the big man. Nor had he shot him. Why, then, was Sanderson bellowing like a frightened calf?

O'Hara felt a hand clutch his shirt and coat collar just back of the neck. He was snatched violently away from Sanderson and flung up against the wall of the room. A hard, low voice asked a question, not of him but of his antagonist.

"What you blattin' about, Shep? This little fellow's only a mouthful for you. . . . Get yore hand away from that gun."

A man had come into the room. He wore a blue flannel shirt, a broad-brimmed soft gray hat, an open vest, and no coat. His trousers were stuffed into the tops of high-heeled cowboy's boots. To the casual glance he was not a large man, certainly not compared with the bulky Sanderson. But he was powerfully built from the muscular slope of the neck down, and he carried himself as one having authority. The light blue eyes were cool and flinty.

Reluctantly, Sanderson's hand fell away from the butt of the .44 which hung at his side. He glanced at the newcomer. The urge struggled in him to defy the man, to wipe out with one swift lift of the arm and crook of the forefinger the tenderfoot who had discomfited him. But he was listening to his master's voice. He knew Dave Ingram too well to set himself against him.

comin' here? Get outa here an' stay out!"

Ingram's voice was like the crack of a whip. The men to whom he spoke were hard fighting men, two of them at least "warriors" from Texas imported because they were known killers, but they had not a word to say for themselves except muttered excuses, sullen but restrained. They laughed to make the best of it and went swaggering out of the building. Sanderson whispered a word in his chief's ear before he left.

Garrett O'Hara had a capacity for hero worship. Looking at this bronzed Westerner, whose word had sent these ruffians trooping from the room, he recognized a leader of great force, strong, iron-willed, master of himself as well as others.

"I'm in your debt, sir," the tenderfoot said.

"Who are you? Where d'you come from?" Ingram asked brusquely.

O'Hara told him.

"Here on business?"

"Expecting to settle somewhere in this country. Looking for a location. I'm a lawyer."

"A lawyer?" Ingram's voice expressed surprise.

"Yes, sir. Some one recommended Concho."

There was a moment of full silence before Ingram spoke. "Come and see me at the store tomorrow—early," he ordered, then turned on his heel and walked out.

CHAPTER II

"My Name Is O'Hara"

Garrett O'Hara walked slowly back to the Concho house. His thoughts raced excitedly as he tried to reduce them to order. Luck had certainly been with him, or he could not have escaped with any credit from a hand-to-hand scuffle with Shep Sanderson. He had been very fortunate, too, that Dave Ingram had come at the nick of time.

Who was this Ingram? Beyond question, he was important in the community. Judging by what he had heard at the hotel, the man was the owner of the Diamond Tail, or at least the manager of it. Also, he seemed to be proprietor of a store in town. He had said to meet him there next day, early. What hour was "early" here? He had not condescended to give him name or mention the location of the store. Evidently he expected people to know him, or if not to find out who he was. There was no doubt of his arrogance. It was unconscious rather than assumed. He had, to back it, good looks, a forceful personality, probably wealth, and no doubt power. One thing more O'Hara knew about him. Very recently he had killed a man for reasons unknown.

Decidedly, before keeping the appointment with Ingram it would be well to find out more about him. O'Hara did not turn in at the Concho house but kept on down the street to the Longhorn corral. Of an attendant, a half-grown boy, he inquired for Mr. Stephen Worrall.

"I dunno where he's at," the wrangler answered. "He was here awhile ago. Might try the Gold Nugget. He bucks the tiger there sometimes."

O'Hara tried the Gold Nugget. A young fellow pointed out Worrall to O'Hara.

Worrall was a tall lanky man with the look of the West stamped indelibly on him. He was perhaps in his late twenties. As he was turning away from the wheel after cashing in his chips O'Hara accosted him.

"You don't know me, Mr. Worrall. My name is O'Hara. I'm a stranger here. This afternoon a young lady made me promise to introduce myself."

"A young lady?" the lank man repeated.

"Miss Steelman."

Worrall took him by the arm. "We'll get outa here," he said, and guided him toward the door. "I was leavin', anyhow. Picked up seventy-five bucks at the wheel. Enough for one night."

They walked down to the Longhorn corral. Worrall asked his companion when he had arrived, what kind of trip he had had, and how he liked the town; but it was not until they were seated in the little office at the corral that he mentioned the name of the girl.

"Are you a friend of Miss Steelman's?" he asked, offering O'Hara a cigar while he himself bit the end from another.

"I can't claim that," the tenderfoot said. "I met her today for the first time. It was a question for a few minutes which one of us had been shot at."

"What's that?" demanded Worrall, a match burning in his hand.

"Just as I say," O'Hara smiled. "I had conclusive evidence to settle the matter." He picked up his hat from the table and looked at the two holes in it.

"You mean some fellow shot at you an' hit yore hat?"

"Yes. To be definite, Shep Sanderson."

"Shep shot at you? Why?"

"That's what I came to have you tell me."

"You don't know why?"

"No."

"You an' him had any row?"

"Not then. We'd never seen each other. This evening we had a difference of opinion."

"How d'you know it was Shep?"

"He admits it. Claims he thought I was an antelope. That won't wash."

Worrall groped in his waistcoat pocket for another match. "Well, you got some idea why he shot at you, haven't you?"

"Miss Steelman had an idea. She told Sanderson he was trying to kill Judge Warner and had mistaken me for him."

The lank man whistled. "Great jumpin' horn' toads! Could it be that? You do kinda favor the Judge. About his size—an' store clothes. What did Shep say when she told him?"

"He denied it, but the way he denied it was a confession. He had no time to think up a good lie, because she was so quick about it. The fellow was flabbergasted. Of course he stuck to his antelope story."

"What d'you mean about Miss Steelman being shot at?"

"Perhaps I'd better tell you the whole story."

"All right. Hop to it." Worrall put his boots on the table and tilted back his chair.

He did not interrupt with a single question until O'Hara had finished, but there was at least one large one in his mind. What was Barbara Steelman doing on the edge of the flats so close to the entrance of Box canyon? He thought he knew the answer, but did not want to believe it.

"So Miss Steelman wanted you to go back home where you come from? An' she wouldn't tell you why?"

"As I understand it, she sent me here to ask you why."

"Maybeso." The freighter rolled out some fat smoke rings and watched them. "You been here only a few hours. Likely you never heard of Dave Ingram."

O'Hara's answer came smilingly: "Heard of him, met him, got an appointment to meet him tomorrow at the store."

The front legs of Worrall's chair came sharply to the floor. Into the long man's face had come an instant wariness. A blank film had taken all expression out of his eyes.

"Oh! You know Mr. Ingram."

"Not exactly. I never heard of him till today."

"I see. You an' he are strangers, but you just happened to meet him an' get an appointment for tomorrow."

The young lawyer knew he had prejudiced his case and he tried to set himself right.

He told the story of the evening's adventure. His account was a brief and modest one, but the salient fact could not be obscured that he had fought it with Bully Sanderson and had not come out second best.

"He yelped for the boys to take you off after you had climbed his frame," Worrall repeated incredulously.

"I was tearing the flesh from his thighs with my spurs," explained the lawyer. "He couldn't shake me off and he couldn't stand the gaft."

Worrall looked at this stranger, shrewd eyes appraising him. "Mr. O'Hara, I don't know you from Adam's off ox," he said. "But if Miss Steelman sent you to me it goes as it lays. That young lady is fine as split silk, an' that's all there is to that. You look like a right limber young fellow, but you can't make Bully Sanderson look like a pore plugged nickel an' get away with it. Seems to me like you've tackled more'n you can ride herd on."

"Likely enough," O'Hara agreed. "I was lucky this time. But there's no reason why he should hold a grudge against me. I was only defending myself."

"Hmp! He's p'ison mean. That's reason enough for him. You made him look like a two-spot. One of these days he'll get the deadwood on you an' do you a meanness. You can bank on that, sure as h—l's hot. I know that bird. He may lay off you right now because Dave Ingram has given orders. That won't mean he's forgot, only that Dave is the big auger. Off-hand, I'll bet you're no kind of a hand with a six-shooter."

"You win the watch on that bet," O'Hara admitted.

"My advice is for you to cut dirt back to the land of marshals, calaboeses, an' plug hats."

"I think I'm going to like it here, Mr. Worrall."

"You're liable to rue yore decision if you stay. By the way, what's yore line, Mr. O'Hara?"

"I'm a lawyer."

"A lawyer. Great jumpin' horn' toads!" A thought stabbed the Westerner and brought his alert attention to another phase of the matter.

"That's why Dave Ingram told you to come see him. Young fellow, if I knew where you were at!"

"I'm a total stranger, as I told you before. Until today I never met a soul in this neck of the woods. I've had no correspondence with anyone. My purpose in coming was to find a good town to hang out a shingle. Now my cards are on the table. I came to talk this over with you because I promised Miss Steelman I would. But since you doubt me—"

He rose and picked up his hat. "Don't push on yore reins, Mr. O'Hara," the freighter told him. "Sit down. I'll tell you whatever you want to know."

Promptly, O'Hara tossed his hat on the table and sat down. "I want to know the inside politics of this town: who is fighting who and why, the reason Shep Sanderson wanted to kill Judge Warner, and the ground for Miss Steelman's advice that I had better not stay here to practice my profession. That will do to begin with."

The crow's feet around Worrall's eyes crinkled to mirth. "You're sure enough a lawyer. Boy, if I answer those questions thorough you won't need to ask any more."

"I've got all night before me," the lawyer said.

Worrall made himself comfortable by resting his weight on the lower end of his spine and his shoulders. He talked.

"If you want it in one word, short an' sweet, that word is 'cows.' Worrall said. "Cows are the cause of all the trouble in this man's town. Goes clear back to the war. Down in Texas them days cattle ran wild, unbranded. All the men folks in the Confederate army. Well, when they come home, licked an' ragged, cows sure dotted the landscape. In a way of speakin'—"

"Hmp! He's P'ison Mean. That's Reason Enough for Him."

they belonged to the fellow who threw the widest loop. Many a herd got its start in the next few months by real industrious brandin' of mavericks. Lots of cows, but no market for 'em. Last few years a market has been developing. Texas got crowded. The boys an' their herds began to emigrate. Some pushed into the San Marcos valley. The one with the biggest herd was old Wes Steelman. Right now, today, he don't begin to know how many cows are carryin' the Hashknife brand."

"I've heard of the Hashknife brand. Didn't they use to call Steelman the king of the San Marcos?"

"Do yet," Worrall nodded. "The Lord sure blessed his herds an' they multiplied, if that's the way you want to look at it. Some folks didn't see it just thataway. Other folks came into the San Marcos, mostly in the upper end of it an' in the hills above the valley. They were small cattle men, what they call nesters. The small cattle men drew together under the leadership of Dave Ingram. Dave owned the Diamond Tail, a right numerous brand. If you listen to his enemies Dave usta be one of that kind of cow man that it would hurt his health to eat a critter with his own brand on it. You don't need to take that at par value. They say the same about every one who has got ahead. Dave can see a dollar far as anyone. He started a store at Concho an' a freight outfit. He got in with the government officials an' secured fat beef contracts to supply the reservations. Small-fry nesters came to him an' he staked them. Dave got to be about the king pin up here in the mountains. What he said went."

"Well, Wes Steelman wasn't any-ways pleased at the way things were shapin'. He had to go farther for markets. His range began to get crowded. Every which way he turned some nester had squatted, an' on top of that was Dave Ingram hornin' in on his markets. Time for him to get busy, he thought. So he started a store in Concho with Patrick McCarthy as his partner. Then he bought out a fellow on Dead Horse creek an' stocked a ranch of his own in the hills seventy miles above the main one in the valley. Both Dave an' Wes are what you might call arbitrary an' bullheaded. There's no compromise in either one of 'em, an' each thinks he ought to be chief. Consequence is, trouble. It grew to a head after a fellow called Shat Brown was killed. Shat was one of the H' hill ranchers up Jim Wilson creek an' he was lined up with Ingram. You've got to understand that while Ingram an' Steelman are major-domos, as you might say, of their factions, they can't ride herd on every ornery waddy that trails along with them."

"I think I see," O'Hara said drily. "They reap the benefit of murder without being responsible for it. A convenient arrangement."

"That's no word to use, not in this country," Worrall told him severely. "If you aim to live long in the land you'll have to get educated. When folks have trouble out here they may have a difficulty resultin' in a shootin'. I've been present at some killings, but that word of yours ain't either discreet or polite. There are some skunks it applies to, but we most generally hang them to the end of a propped-up wagon pole or a cotton-wood."

"I'll have to learn the technical differences in homicides," the lawyer said.

Worrall detected a faint flavor of irony in this remark. He dropped his feet from the table and rested an arm upon it, leaning forward toward his guest.

"See here, young fellow, I'll offer you advice free gratis, seeing as Miss Steelman sent you to me an' seeing as I kinda cotton to you anyhow. Keep yore mouth padlocked. Folks fight here at the drop of the hat. Maybe you got sand in yore craw. I ain't sayin' no. Worse for you if you have, for you wouldn't last a split second when some low-down bird smokes up. Where was I at? After Shat Brown got killed Ingram an' his store partner Tom Harvey began to bring in Texas warriors. So did Steelman an' McCarthy. I'm not tellin' any secret when I say that right soon now some one is gonna drop a match in a keg of powder an' our H' private war will begin to pop."

"You mean—"

"I mean that if Shep Sanderson hadn't made a mistake in his man today an' had shot straighter, if he had killed Judge Warner, the fat would already have been in the fire."

"How does Judge Warner come into it?"

"Another long story in that, but the upshot of it is that tomorrow he's expected to make Wes Steelman administrator of the estate of Jerry Hughes. Jerry was a friend of Ingram's an' his place is a sort of strategic point between the Diamond Tail an' the upper Hashknife ranch. Both Wes an' Dave want mighty bad to control it." Worrall added, to make the situation clearer: "Dave stepped in an' took charge of the place when Jerry died. He'd hate to give it up."

"So as a simple way out he decided to kill Judge Warner, an innocent party."

"Judge Warner is known to be friendly to the Steelman side, an' we don't know that Dave knew a thing about what Shep was aimin' to do. Myself, I don't hardly think he did. If you want to stay in Concho an' be Dave Ingram's man or Wes Steelman's why hop to it an' hang up yore shingle. I wouldn't wish to insure yore life, but that's neither here nor there, as the fellow said when his two wives met an' he lit out for the chaparral."

O'Hara rose. "If I hang out my shingle I'll be by own man."

The long man grinned. "You'll have a heap of time on yore hands to learn yore Blackstone thorough," he answered.

"And you, Mr. Worrall? Do you expect to sit on the fence and keep out of this fight?"

"I wish I knew," Worrall answered impulsively. "I'd like to, but here's where I'm at. Ingram an' Harvey have got their own freight outfit. I haul for Steelman's store an' for private parties. Looks to me like I'm gonna be drug in whether I want to or not, but you'll sure hear me yellin' for a while that I'm an innocent bystander."

Imps of mischief kicked up their heels in O'Hara's brown eyes. His remark apparently had no connection with anything that had gone before. "Yes, Miss Steelman is a very attractive lady. As you say, if you're going to be dragged in anyhow—"

Worrall blushed beneath the tan.

"Who said anything about Miss Steelman?"

The young lawyer fled, but he flung a grin back at the "innocent bystander."

Odd Prescription That "Cured" African Native

There are modernists even among the witch-doctors of Africa, to judge by the story told by a missionary on furlough about the native who was treated with powdered gramophone record mixed with water from a locomotive—the engine water to make him move and the record dust to make him talk. In its own way the treatment is not illogical—and it embodies an obvious compliment to the white man's capacity for "big ju-ju."

It is water that makes the engine move and the record which makes the gramophone talk—the only flaw in the argument is that the patient was neither a phonograph nor a locomotive. However, he recovered the use of his limbs and tongue—so simple faith must have once more proved its superiority to that nasty, know-all spirit, by failing to perceive the fall-lacy on which the treatment was based.

One would like to know that witch-doctor's recipe for deafness. Probably he gives his patients a strong infusion of the telephone directory.—Manchester (Eng.) Guardian.

Weight of Asbestos

It would be difficult to say how light asbestos is in its native form. It is quite a heavy stone, but it may be fluffed up until it is very light. The amphibole variety is very weak and is used principally for pipe covering, etc. The chrysotile variety strong and is long enough may be used for spinning.—Exchange.

It is bad manners to talk about what luxuries you have to poor people.

SENSE AND SAFETY

So appalling is the total of deaths and injuries due to automobile accidents, that any means whereby these casualties may be reduced must be welcomed by everyone.

It has been found that a large percentage of traffic accidents is due to car defects, and especially defective brakes. So serious has the brake problem become that some states have made periodical brake inspection compulsory, while similar legislation is pending in others.

The effort being made by automotive organizations and motor vehicle officials to eliminate unfit cars from the road is a commendable step in the direction of safety.

As a contribution to the safety movement, one of the largest brake lining manufacturers is offering a hundred dollar one-year accident insurance policy without extra cost to each car owner who has his brakes relined with the company's product, and then his brakes inspected at regular intervals without charge at any of the company's forty thousand authorized service stations. It is said that 58,000 motorists received these policies the first month they were offered.

This appears to be good sense used in the interest of safety, as it tends to keep the motorist reminded of the fact that his car has brakes—most dangerous equipment when they don't work.

OUTLOOK IS BETTER

Experienced observers of business conditions agree that there is a decided improvement in the outlook, although recovery may be gradual. That the tide has really turned appears to be a widely accepted fact.

Voicing the general opinion of industrial leaders, Silas H. Altorfer, washing machine manufacturer, gave some reasons for optimism in a recent statement, in which he said in part:

"Business leaders should have only strong faith in our general outlook. Our national wealth is more than 150 per cent greater than in 1915, and national income has increased proportionately. Mutual savings bank deposits have gained almost 300 per cent during the same period. Electrically wired homes have doubled in number since 1920, while home construction has grown 425 per cent. Fundamental improvements in the general situation are so sound and so extensive we need not fear for continued advancement."

In recent utterances President Hoover and other leaders also have counseled courage to go forward. Business periodicals are urging the same thing. These admonitions are bearing fruit in increased activity in many lines. On the whole the outlook is decidedly better than at any time during the year.

The pen is mightier, all right, but it's hard to get our worst crooks into the pen.

AIRSHIP DISASTERS

Again the world has been shocked by a terrible airship disaster, the largest dirigible in the world, the British R-101, having been wrecked in a storm over France, with a loss of forty-seven lives out of fifty-four aboard the ill-fated airship.

These great craft, which cost five million dollars, was destroyed just one week less than a year after first taking to the air.

Other notable disasters to dirigibles are recalled by the fate of the R-101. The ZR-2, bought by the United States from England, exploded over Hull in 1921, only four out of sixty-six persons aboard being saved.

In 1922 the Roma, bought from Italy for the U. S. Army, was destroyed at Hampton Roads when it became unmanageable and crashed into a high-voltage electric line and burned with a loss of thirty-five lives.

In 1923 the French dirigible Dixmude, after breaking all then existing distance records, disappeared in a storm over the Mediterranean, all of the fifty persons aboard being lost.

In 1925 the Navy dirigible Shenandoah broke into three parts while battling a storm over Ohio. Of forty-one persons in the crew, fourteen were killed and two were seriously injured, the escape of the survivors seeming almost miraculous.

In 1928 the Italian dirigible Italia, after crossing the North Pole, was wrecked with the loss of a part of the crew of fifteen and Commander Nobile and others were injured. Amundsen, discovered of the South Pole, perished in an attempt to rescue the Nobile party.

Many smaller dirigibles have likewise met disaster in peace time cruises, while during the World war more than 100 were lost by Germany alone.

The dirigible may one day become a relatively safe and valuable means of transportation, but it has so far proved to be one of the most hazardous.

THE NEW WASHINGTON

New buildings and other improvements completed, under construction and planned, will in a few years make Washington the most beautiful capital in the world, it is declared. Appropriations authorized for the present extensive construction and beautification program total more than $325,000,000.

Already magnificent new buildings for the Department of Agriculture, Supreme Court, Internal Revenue offices, and Department of Commerce are either finished or well on the way toward completion. The new Arlington memorial bridge costing nearly fifteen million dollars is also nearly finished.

Other improvements to go forward immediately include buildings for the Postoffice Department, Departments of Justice, Labor, War and Navy, a new House official building, the new Botanical Gardens, and numerous annexes to existing structures. This by no means exhausts the list of improvements contemplated, but will give some idea of the magnitude of the program.

The people of the United States will look with approval on this plan to develop a capital city whose scenic and architectural beauty will be in keeping with the nations' greatness. The new Washington will be a city in which every American citizen will have a patriotic pride.

A PUBLIC SALE IN '49

Interesting sidelights on the manners and customs of bygone days are found in an old advertisement, one of which was recently reproduced by an exchange, and quotes a public sale announcement published at Versailles, Kentucky, eighty-one years ago.

Some may wonder why anyone possessed of the large and varied assortment of worldly goods listed would want to leave Kentucky. Anyway, here is the advertisement:

"Having sold my farm, and as I am leaving for Oregon Territory by oxen team on March 1, 1849, I will sell all my personal property except two oxen teams (Ben and Buck, and Lon and Jerry), consisting of the following:

"Two milk cows, 1 grey mare and colt, 1 pair oxen, 1 yoke, 1 baby yoke, 2 ox cars, 1 plow with wood mold board, 800 feet wether-boards, 1,500 fence rails, 1 60-gallon soap kettle, 85 sugar troughs, 10 gallons maple syrup, 1 barrel Johnson-Miller whisky 7 years old, 20 gallons apple brandy, 1 40-gallon copper still, 2 spinning wheels, 30 pounds tallow, 1 large loom, 300 poles, 100 split hoops, 100 empty barrels, 4 sides leather, 12 wooden pitchforks, half interest in tan yards, 1 rifle with bullet molds and powder horn, soft soap, bacon, hams, lard, molasses, 6 head of fox hounds, all soft-mouthed but one.

"Also 6 negro slaves, 2 men, 2 boys and 2 mulatto wenches, all together to one party, as I will not separate them.

"Sale will begin at 8 A. M. Plenty to eat and drink."

After questioning 750 students as to whether their memories were more pleasant or unpleasant, a psychologist reported that unpleasant memories loom up more in the minds of both men and women.

FIRE IN HOMES

An authority points out that about 10 per cent of America's half billion dollar annual fire loss represents damage done to homes. Approximately $50,000,000 of domestic property is destroyed each year.

Most of this waste can be laid to carelessness, neglect, or false economy in the matter of home construction. Practically all home fires are preventable. Defective flues and electric wiring, lack of fire stops and the like are the causes of a terrible amount of suffering and a gigantic waste.

The only solution to the problem is knowledge and unceasing vigilance on the part of home owners. Flues should be periodically cleaned; wiring should be inspected and when necessary replaced; attention should be given to heating plants; care should be taken in disposing of waste of all kinds. These are little things that can be accomplished at small expense in either time or money. Yet they may be the means of preventing a great conflagration.

It should be remembered that fire is every citizen's problem. Whether or not our own property is damaged, we pay for every fire in the community, large or small. Fire loss is reflected in business conditions, in employment, in taxes for fire departments, in home building and industrial development. Not to take the steps that prevent fire is to be guilty of criminal neglect.

SHOULD STICK TO FACTS

Considerable comment has been made on a recent speech by Ambassador Sackett in which he stated that there was too great a difference between the cost of generating electric current and its selling price. It has been sought to convey the impression that this difference represents profit.

This is not the case, because the cost of generating the current itself is but a very small part of the expense involved in getting it to the consumer's meter. The expense of management, the cost of constructing and maintaining transmission lines and distribution systems, the pay of meter readers, office personnel and other employees, taxes and many more items must be taken care of before profit can be computed.

The principle is similar to that of a water system. One may take a bucket to a river or other source of supply and obtain water free. But when, pumped, purified and piped to the consumer's spigot it becomes a commodity of value. Electricity rates, like water rates, depend largely upon the conditions which surround its distribution.

Whether rates in any given case are fair or not is a matter for determination according to these conditions, and it is for that purpose that public service commissions elected by the people have been established in practically every state.

In any great industry it is inevitable that abuses may crop out here and there, and these should be pointed out with a view to their remedy. But this should be done in a spirit of fairness, and without twisting the facts to produce a wrong impression in the public mind.

SMALL TOWN BIG STORE

Another instance of a big store in a small town has come to attention, that of Davy & Company, in Evart, Mich., a town of only 1,300 people, but having a trading radius of 30 miles, according to Editor Ratcliff of the Evart Review.

The Review is 58 years old, the Davy store is 48, and during all these 48 years the store has never failed to have an advertisement in every issue of the newspaper. In that time a record has been kept which shows that the space used by the store would equal 1,359 full pages of the Review, which, by the way, is an exceptional weekly newspaper.

Here, then, is a combination hard to beat—a high-class newspaper and an enterprising store that never lets an issue go out without its sales message, whether times are good, bad or indifferent. And such a combination will win almost anywhere, as it has in Evart, where people within a radius of 30 miles have their trading center in a town of 1,300.

A DARING GIRL FLYER

Among the many able woman flyers who have won fame in recent years, probably none excels Miss Laura Ingalls, a diminutive New York girl, who in recent weeks has set three significant records for her sex.

She did 714 barrel rolls in one flight, and in another made 908 consecutive inside loops. Her latest performance is a solo flight across the continent from New York to Glendale, California, in 30 hours and 27 minutes elapsed time, a new record for women. Her last 300 miles was covered in storm and fog.

The exploits of Miss Ingalls and dozens of other avatrices have proved that they are not wanting in either skill or courage, while many of them have shown powers of endurance which are really remarkable.

Of the 63,000,000 inhabitants in Germany, 1,400,000 are on the payroll of the government or state.

By winning the recent world's series Connie Mack brought the highest baseball honors to Philadelphia for the fifth time during his career as manager, following his winning of the American League pennant for the eighth time. McGraw of the New York Giants has won ten National League pennants, but has been victor in only three world's series contests.

The OBJECT of the Electric Railway Tax Equalization Amendment (Number Four on the ballot) is to reclassify for taxation purposes the electric railways of California as distinct from the steam railroads and to place the taxes of the electric railways on an equality with taxes paid on common property and by the motor bus and stage companies. It is:

BASED on the California Tax Commission's findings that the electric railways "bear a disproportionately large tax burden."

APPROVED unanimously by the Senate Committee on Revenue and Taxation and the Assembly Committee on Constitutional Amendments.

RELIEF FROM CURSE OF CONSTIPATION

A Battle Creek physician says, "Constipation is responsible for more misery than any other cause."

But immediate relief has been found. A tablet called Rexall Orderlies has been discovered. This tablet attracts water from the system into the colon. The water loosens the dry food waste and causes a gentle, thorough, natural movement without forming a habit or even increasing the dose.

SIDELIGHTS

Add to endurance records of the year one that few indeed could hope to approach. Arthur Rizo swam 68 hours and 11 minutes off the coast of Malta, beating the previous record of 67 hours and 10 minutes, held by P. K. Gosh of Calcutta.

Only moderate toll was taken by the law when Mrs. Margaret Johnson, 17, of Richmond, Indiana, was fined $15 for crap shooting. She had won $235, so she had $220 net profit as a result of her investment.

One reason for the divorce suit filed by Mrs. Amelia Moulton of Evanston, Illinois, against Harold Moulton, whose advertisement she answered, was that she learned too late that he had a wooden leg.

Prof. Pitkin of Columbia University thinks Babe Ruth is not overpaid, and says in a recent book: "Were men paid according to scarcity of rivals who can do their work equally well, Babe Ruth should be receiving at least ten million dollars a year, instead of the paltry eighty thousand he now pockets."

Production of motorcycles increased 16 per cent during the last year. The news is not as bad as it sounds, so far as this country is concerned, as United States production actually declined.

The inventor of miniature golf may go down in history as a benefactor of the cotton farmer. Already nearly two million yards of cotton fabric have been used in connection with these golf courses and equipment, including tarpaulins, folding chairs, umbrellas and other accessories.

Post mortems are futile in sport as elsewhere, thinks Walter Hagen, erstwhile golf champion, who says: "Play the next shot; the one you just played is over."

Belgium recently lent a New York hospital a gram of radium, worth about $70,000. Scientists are developing a new vacuum tube which it is said may largely supersede radium in the treatment of disease, as it emits rays having properties similar to emanations from the precious substance.

So faithfully did Clarence Hall's bulldog guard the contents of his wagon which had been demolished that Indiana police were unable to remove the goods to protect them from the rain.

Sentiment and generosity caused a passenger on the Maruettania to pay $960 for a tennis racket, auctioned on the high seas a few days ago. The racket was the one with which Betty Nuthall of England won the American women's tennis championship, and she had donated it to be sold for charity.

To carry heavy loads at high speed is now a major airplane objective. A new official record in this line was made recently by Leroy Manning, chief Ford pilot, who flew 157 miles an hour with a cargo weighing 4,409 pounds.

Prof. Bristow Adams, of Cornell is said to hold a unique place among those who have called on President Hoover recently. He just dropped in for a brief chat and had no favors to ask. The chief executive said it was an unusual pleasure to talk to someone who didn't want something.

A right jolly funeral was recently held at which Governor Pollard of Virginia delivered an oration which contained no eulogy of the "deceased." It was in the nature of mock services to mark the passing of "Business D. Pression," the coffin bearing placards inscribed "Forward at once, straight to hell," and "Perishable, keep in red hot oven." After the ceremonies the "remains" were thrown into Chesapeake bay.

Among the momentous questions before the new Tariff Commission is that of reducing the duty on men's silk opera hats, for which request has been made. If the commission is unable to reach a satisfactory conclusion, perhaps a Senate investigation committee would help. Some would doubtless like that kind of a hat to talk through.

How very much alike twins may be in actions as well as looks, is illustrated by Herman and Albert Jackson, of Chicago. Both got married five years ago; both deserted their wives a year ago; both married without being divorced a few weeks ago; both were arrested for bigamy a few days ago.

Getting Our Money's Worth

The debt we pay most reluctantly—is taxes.

Yet taxes take a very small portion of the annual income, and give us the greatest return on any dollar spent.

Properly assessed taxes represent the only equitable means of raising federal, state and local revenue for the carrying on of government, education and public safety and health.

Good citizens are good taxpayers. The tax evader is not only a poor citizen—he is a barnacle on society, taking the privileges and protection that is being financed by others.

Because of the magic of cooperative action our tax dollar goes further than any spent by us as individuals, and gives us a genuine proprietorship in our community. We may point out good roads, parks and public buildings with pardonable pride when our dollars have helped build them. Taxpayers leave the world a better place than they found it.

Most communities need more money for the common welfare. Taxes work miracles in the community. Of the hundreds of items which go to make up the average community more are dependent on tax money for support than all other sources together.

and the value of the tax dollar to*

DEATH AND TAXES

There is an old saying: "There are but two SURE things in this world—Death and Taxes."

The one is on our minds each day. Thousands of skilled men and women are giving their lives in an effort to equalize the battle between Man and Death. And every day the world's millions, seriously or casually, but deeply, think of this one of the two certainties of this world.

On the other hand, of course, Taxes (the other certainty of this life) are nowhere near as important as our final bow to this world, and we could not expect a corps of Dollar-Doctors, or Mill-Physicians and Tax-Worriers to spring up to complete the comparison we have just made. BUT—if Taxes are that CERTAIN (and they always have been and apparently always will be) why not give them more thought, employ more skill, and in every way try to get MORE out of our "Tax-Dollar."

Our local schools: are they under-nourished or are they overfed? Our local streets: do we reach willingly into our pockets for dollars with which to pay for them, or are those dollars wrenched out in the form of jangled nerves, lost time, and repaired cars and trucks because of too narrow, too rough, or even muddy streets? Our businesses and homes: do we pay Tax Dollars to the municipality, each our own little share, for police and fire departments—or do some of us pay bitterly the losses which come from careless administration or curtailed budgets?

Health enters in; recreation enters in; charities enter in, as well as civic expense and miscellaneous items. We must consider them all. Taxes are important. Taxes are definite. Taxes are as sure as Death. In fact, Taxes as we all can see, determine in our community, as in all communities, something of how and when we meet up with the other certainty.

Every man takes pride when his savings, whether large or small, bring him in returns. Why not take pride in the savings of Taxes and the returns they bring us? Not the savings in reduced Taxes, but the savings in Taxes fairly levied, properly administered, and enjoyed generally.

This is something for every one of us to consider. The responsibility is individual. If we, as citizens, want something of our fellow-citizens, our "business-organization-town" which is YOURS and MINE, will furnish it if it is needed, and will do it through our TAX DOLLARS—yours and mine.

DID YOU EVER STOP TO THINK?

By Edson R. Waite, Shawnee, Okla.
H. Galt Braxton, editor and publisher of the Kingston (N. C.) Daily Free Press and chairman of the Southern Newspaper Publishers' Association's advertising committee, says:

"Advertising continues to be the key-word in the mind, contemplation and planning of the average business executive in these days when economic depression is more or less general. And well may it be so; for the business man who has something to sell, to become so pessimistic and depressed in his thinking as to conclude that there is no market, no money and no demand for his goods and therefore that they must stay on his shelves, is, of course, to make a complete surrender.

"Naturally, no business man will admit that such is his attitude, yet the concern which has materially reduced its advertising appropriation or ceased making use of promotional and publicity means for the sale of its wares, has done that very thing.

"It is like the Honorable William Jennings Bryan was wont to say: 'The man who undertakes to do business without advertising is like the fellow who kisses his girl in the dark. She knows what he is doing but nobody else does.' In his case it is probably desirable that no publicity attach, but certainly it is not so with the business man who would succeed.

"It is an erroneous assumption to conclude that there is no market for the necessities of life in these days. While people may not be buying as copiously as in flush times, they are nevertheless still buying, and they are patronizing those concerns that evince life and progress by the appeal in the public print for their patronage.

"These are days when unusual salesmanship ability and publicity methods which are out of the ordinary must be employed. Unfortunate is the business man who does not realize this fact and who finds it more to his liking to give up rather than introduce a new idea into his promotional program."

The tiny fossil of a land tortoise found in Wyoming was the subject of a recent report by the National Museum. Its distinction is due to the fact that it is the smallest on record, only two and a half inches long; also the oldest, about 20,000,000 years. Other specimens of this type in the museum reach a length of three feet.

CAMP FIRE BAZAAR AND WHIST

Another year has rolled around, and it is again time for the Camp Fire Girls' whist party. This year's party, however, will have an added attraction. A bazaar! The Camp Fire girls are again showing their speed by presenting the first bazaar of the season, and it has all the ear-marks of being the best, too. Much time and trouble has been spent in planning and making articles of real value, to be sold at low cost. The girls have all worked hard to put this over big, and it's up to Daly City to show their appreciation of the work of the girls. Outside cities have helped by contributing articles that can be sold at the bazaar. A large package has been received from St. Louis, Mo. Another from Oakland, and another from Los Angeles. Surely, Daly City will do as much for their own. Some of the girls will call on you within the next few weeks, and ask you to set aside November 14 as the day on which you will spend your time and money at their bazaar. The place is Masonic Hall, Daly City, and the time for the whist is 9 P. M. sharp. The bazaar starts at 6:30. Tickets are 35 cents. After the whist you will be able to buy cakes, candy, coffee, etc. Be sure and come, or you will miss a dandy time.

SMART SHOP REPORTS BOOMING BUSINESS

Sales have been encouraging lately at the Smart Shop in the Daly City Theatre building, with prospects they will grow even heavier in the next few weeks. The fair sex have found out that they need not go far afield in order to obtain the very smartest in gowns and hats. "Smart" is just what the shop is, and it must be said no store was ever more aptly named.

The fall season has been a highly successful one and the following seasons promise to be more satisfactory in every way.

Particular attention is invariably taken in the "dressing" of the windows and it is becoming a truism out this way that if you want to see a real display of beautiful examples of the modiste's art you must take a look at the Smart Shop windows.

SUDDEN DEATH OF JOHN BODIN

The family of John E. Bodin, who for the past three years resided at 3375 San Jose avenue, are receiving the condolences of their many friends upon his sudden death, caused by a heart attack. Bodin leaves to mourn his passing a widow, Emma Bodin, and a son, Marvin Bodin, besides two brothers, Charles H. and Peter E. Bodin, and a sister, Mary Baekke, of Canada. Funeral services will be held today at Lasswell's mortuary chapel, the services being read by the pastor of the Swedish Tabernacle of San Francisco. Interment will be in Cypress Lawn cemetery.

THE PRESBYTERIAN CHURCH HAS MODEL AIRPLANE CLUB

A Boy's Club in Grace church is at present all enthused over the model airplane craze. With Balsa wood and Japanese paper the boys are making indoor planes which can fly with amazing grace in the social room of the church. The planes resemble giant dragon flies as they fly slowly across the hall. When they reach the end of the hall they "crash" against the wall, but are so light they immediately recover and start off in another direction.
